

Multiform integration training in Swedish

Did you know that under the Integration Act, individuals in the integration process have the right to choose either Finnish or Swedish as their integration language, regardless of where they live in Finland?

Since spring 2020, Arffman has offered multiform integration training in Swedish as a joint initiative of Uusimaa, Northern Finland, and Ostrobothnia. Participants from other regions in Finland are also welcome to join. As part of our Swedish-language services, we also conduct initial assessments online.

ARFFMAN'S MULTIFORM INTEGRATION TRAINING IN SWEDISH

Our training operates like a village school, providing personalized support based on each participant's unique needs and abilities. Key features include:

- Small group sizes and flexible starting dates.
- Most lessons conducted online with a strong focus on practical and functional teaching methods tailored to everyday life.
- Interactive lessons that prioritize oral language skills.
- Regular in-person meetings in areas with larger numbers of participants.
- A six-week on-the-job learning period, with trainers providing on-site guidance.
- A Finnish language module that prepares participants for common service interactions in real-life situations.
- Comprehensive guidance for career and educational pathways.

WHY CHOOSE MULTIFORM OR ONLINE TRAINING?

- By studying online, you can learn the language and gain insights into Finnish culture and society just as effectively as in a classroom—or even better. Participating in lessons is easy and convenient from the comfort of your home!
- This approach is both economically sustainable and accessible. It enables training even in situations where there are only a few Swedish-speaking individuals in a single municipality or when participants live far apart with limited public transportation options.
- Groups can be easily divided into smaller subgroups based on skill levels, allowing new students to join ongoing training as soon as places become available.
- Arffman's online learning environment also provides students the flexibility to review and revisit previously learned material at their own pace.
